(Russell Haight, the American soldier of fortune who joined Kashmir's "private" Moslem army, fighting for a Free State against regular Indian army troops, wanted action when he got to the front.

He didn't like the leisurely way his native fellow officers handled things. He asked for a "chance to develop some real action"—and got it.

A SUMMARY OF THE NEWS

The United States, Britain and France were accused by Russia yesterday of having made World War II possible in Moscow's first reply to the publication by this country of captured secret Nazi-Soviet documents from 1939 to 1941. A statement by the Soviet Information Bureau titled "Falsifiers of History—A Historical Note" said that "a golden rain of American dollars" had financed Hitler's war industry and that Britain and France had "rejected" collective security.

Only the German side was presented, the statement said, because the aim of the United States in publishing the diplomatic papers was "to present distorted pictures, to slander the Soviet Union and undermine its influence and reputation as a staunch fighter for democratic aims." Moscow promised to publish its own documents some time.

Russia maintained her attack on the United States and Britain in the United Nations Economic and Social Council, charging both nations with exploiting Latin America to keep those countries in a "semi-colonial status." The British delegate replied that the charges were "false assumptions supported by distorted facts" and "incredibly shallow, based on pseudo-Marxist reasoning."

Three leaders of the Annual Salvation Army Maintenance Fund Campaign talk it over. From left to right: Mr. John G. Keck, leading Philadelphia realtor, who is head of Community Division; Mr. E. Lawrence Worstall, vice-president of the Philadelphia National Bank, who is general chairman for the drive; and Mr. Oscar Schaefer, Philadelphia Gas Works Company, who heads District 8.

The drive this year begins on April 1. The goal is $750,000—and the "Army" slogan is "Put your heart in it and give—Give generously."

4 CHARGED WITH MURDER ARE WELL GUARDED IN COURT AT COUNTY SEAT

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 10 — Charged with the murder of William Kelly, 38, of Trevoze, four young Philadelphia men were led into court here at 9:50 this morning, prior to arrival of the spectators.

The four were in custody of four husky Pennsylvania state troopers. Seated in the prisoners' row they were also guarded by Bucks County's sheriff, two deputies, and two county detectives.

To the grand jury and spectators, the four appeared like high school juniors, rather than four accused of murder. Neatly dressed, they listened attentively as President Judge Hiram H. Keller delivered a special 10 minute charge to the Grand Jury on the offense of murder.

Kelly, an innocent bystander, died several days after he was shot. Harry Zeitz, 18, is said by police to have been the "trigger man" who shot Kelly. Other defendants are: Harold Foster, 23, David Darcy, 22, and Felix Capone, 16, all of Philadelphia.

Eight women and 10 men make up the grand jury. In his closing remarks to them Judge Keller emphasized the point that if the jury finds that any of the accused assisted in the crime in any way they are guilty of the offense (murder) charged, whether they fired fatal shots or not.

Bristol Borough Council last night adopted a regular tax rate of 16 mills, which is one and a half mills higher than last year's rate. Twelve mills is for current operation of Borough business and four mills for debt service.

At the same time the Borough took up consideration of a special amusement tax to raise the equivalent of two mills more in the regular tax which had been discussed to finance the present budget, but which had been decided against.

Borough Attorney J. Leslie Kircy, on motion of Councilman Riley, chairman of the Finance Committee, was instructed to draw up an ordinance for the amusement tax. This would mean a tax on movie tickets and on certain other types of commercial entertainment. The rate of the tax is still to be decided, as is the method of collection. The ordinance is to be considered at the next session of Borough Council.

At the January meeting of Borough Council, the budget had been submitted on the basis of an 18-mill regular tax. To permit the budget to be balanced tentatively at the 16-mill rate, several cuts in the budget were made. One of these is an item of $1500 for the Tree Commission, which had been decided to be illegal.

Another omission from the budget, as it now stands, is the sum of $3300 which had previously been discussed as an appropriation for the Bristol Recreation Commission, for a proposed park back of Mill street.

Also cut was the appropriation for the Streets and Highways Committee, which was reduced $12,000. It was understood that the Streets and Highways Committee would receive the first new revenues which come in, presumably from the proposed amusement tax. It was understood also that if tax collection runs higher than predicted, or if the new tax produces more than the Highway Committee needs, the appropriation to the proposed park also will be restored.

The changes in the budget were explained by Councilman Riley, making his first appearance on the floor as chairman of the Finance Committee. He was appointed about two weeks ago, after Councilman Louis C. Spring, who had been appointed at the beginning of the year, declined the position because of the heavy obligations of the Water Committee, of which he also is chairman.

There was considerable discussion about the proposal to set up an amusement tax. Many questions were asked, pertaining to the size of the tax, the type of amusement it would cover, whether amateur and semi-professional sports would be covered. It was replied to these questions that they could not be answered until the ordinance itself had been drafted, and the effect of all the state laws on the subject had been studied.

On the vote to have the ordinance drawn for submission next month, the one dissenting vote was that of Councilman James Eagan. He said that the bulk of the tax would fall on the businesses of the two movie houses in Bristol, and that he did not consider such a tax a fair distribution of the burden.

Several other suggestions were made about ways in which the Borough could be helped.

Councilman William A. Pearson, last evening, said that the street committee of which he is chairman had contracted for a snowplow on November 15th, to be delivered on December 15th. When it did not arrive, Pearson contacted the firm and delivery was promised for January 15th. Again when delivery was not made the firm was contacted and the committee was then advised that due to a strike, delivery could not be guaranteed by any definite date.

"Print this in the press," Pearson remarked upon the floor of council.

Previous to the convening of council, the Courier was given another statement for publication. This statement was by James Eagan, 4th ward councilman, and was made in reply to a comment of Albert Sommerfeld, quoted recently in the Courier.

Eagan said: "If it takes as long to get the snowplow as it does to get a taxi in Bristol, we will not have the snowplow even by July 4th."

NOT BE CONDUCTEDSo Few Registrants Cause
Cancellation of Eight Courses of School

FEB. 12TH IS LAST DATE

The response of the public to register in the Bristol Adult School has been very disappointing to the directors. Eight courses have had to be dropped from the curriculum as not enough people registered for them to make it possible to give them. All of the courses need more registrants to make it possible to open the school.It takes 15 registrants to pay for the instructor of the course, and none of the courses have enough to be given.Thursday evening, February 12th, registrations will be accepted in the Bristol high school cafeteria. This registration night will determine whether any of the courses can be given.The 11 courses that need only a few more registrants are: Social dancing for teen-agers; typewriting, beginners; social dancing, adults; Spanish; shorthand, sketching and painting; mechanical drafting, network; upholstery; sewing, beginners; sewing, advanced; contract bridge; pottery, and photography.The eight courses which will have to be dropped are: Home gardening; sports round table; household mechanics, basic English; lettering and commercial art; painting and interior decorating; woodwork and hobbies—because the courses had no registrants, or only one, which made it impossible to hope to give the courses this term.

Former Big-Time Gambler Struggles for Life

Beverly Hills, Cal. — Tony Corneo Stralla, former big-time gambler, struggled today against the same ruthless gangland death that wiped out Ben (Bugsy) Siegel and Beverly Hills gambler "Polly" Gibbons within the past 18 months. Corneo was pronounced in fair condition after he was shot in the stomach last night by two men when he answered the door-bell at his fashionable Beverly Hills home.

Announce Arrest of Williamson

Washington — Attorney General Clark announced the arrest in New York today of John B. Williamson, labor secretary of the Communist Party in the United States and described as one of the world's most influential Communists. Williamson was seized by agents of the FBI and Immigration Service. He was taken to Ellis Island to await deportation proceedings. The Justice Department disclosed that the arrest followed a long scrutiny of Williamson's career, allegedly resulting in evidence that he had falsified U. S. citizenship.

Operation "Snowplow"

Councilman William A. Pearson, last evening, said that the street committee of which he is chairman had contracted for a snowplow on November 15th, to be delivered on December 15th.
When it did not arrive, Pearson contacted the firm and delivery was promised for January 15th.
Again when delivery was not made the firm was contacted and the committee was then advised that due to a strike, delivery could not be guaranteed by any definite date.
"Print this in the press," Pearson remarked upon the floor of council.Previous to the convening of council, the Courier was given another statement for publication. This statement was by James Eagan, 4th ward councilmember, and was made in reply to a comment of Albert Sommerfield, quoted recently in the Courier.Eagan said: "If it takes as long to get the snowplow as it does to get a taxi in Bristol, we will not have the snowplow
even by July 4th."

FAMILIES AND HOUSES

Fifty-two experts—architects, builders, housing officials, medical authorities, home economists, sociologists and others—have come forward with another reason for solving the housing problem. They see in it a serious threat to the average family's desire to have children.

This conclusion is set forth in a booklet entitled "Houses for Family Living," published by the Woman's Foundation, Inc., a philanthropic organization devoted to research in "problems of the American home and of the American woman."

It is a thought-provoking case. The report points out that the American family has already shrunk. Today it is smaller by one-fourth than it was at one time. One reason for this is that the child, once a potential producer and thus an asset, is today an economic liability in most American homes "from the day the first doctor bills arrive."

So this incentive for a family to have children has largely disappeared. Those remaining are weakened, says the report, when there is a shortage of houses, when building costs are high, when existing dwellings are inadequate. It declares that a "prime issue of major family difficulties" lies in "the obsolete home and the obsolete community."

On the other side there is the evidence, in the unexpectedly high birth rate of the postwar years, that American families have children first and worry about houses to live in afterward. But in the long run the housing shortage could reverse the habit.

PUNCTURING INFLATION

The law of supply and demand is beginning to function again, and in a manner that promises to bring prices to a realistic level. A buyers' strike has been gaining momentum, unheralded and unsung, and when this happens stocks and bonds, commodities and bread, automobiles and houses revert to prices that people will pay.

No one can contend seriously that a new house today is worth six times what a comparable structure cost 35 years ago. And, make no mistake about it, it will cost less than it has in recent months before the year's end. There is no danger of ruinous deflation, however. There is still backed up demand for goods and commodities, but at honest prices.

A Senate committee has turned thumbs down on meat rationing. So perhaps it will not be necessary to go through all that "utility" bunk again, after all.

New Jersey woman has turned given a divorce because her husband rubbed her face with a steak. Presumably, if he had wrapped a mink coat around her he would be electrocuted.

It is estimated that more than 300,000 cigarettes are lighted every minute, but it is not revealed how many of them burn table tops.

Yankee Soldier Wanted Action And He Got It

They are wild enough. Monkeys, tigers, and black and brown bear abound. As we passed jungles on the road from Rawalpindi in Pakistan I still cherished the hope of taking squads far behind the enemy lines, destroying communications, blowing up bridges, and creating general havoc.

Those thoughts and ideas were not based on my own war experience. I'd been wounded in the Canadian army during the Dieppe raid, and in the American army during the Normandy invasion.

I landed at Dieppe and right away got shot in the leg. Then when I was down, a Jerry rushed me with a rifle butt. When I came to, I was in a hospital in England.

On D-Day in Normandy, I waded ashore and quick like an artillery burst got a chunk of shrapnel in my other leg. So they put me on the boat again, and there I was, back in an English hospital again.

I wound up the war a sergeant in the Air Force at Lowry Field, near Denver.

I spent seven years in the American and Canadian armies during World War II but I saw only a few hours of action.

Maybe that's why I still had the yen to be a "hero" and had to get into a little war that hardly anyone has heard of, to see the kind of combat so many of my buddies had experienced.

When I got to the Punch front, I was full of fight. I found that the free Kashmir outfit had some 2,000 troops besieging a town of about 10,000, defended by perhaps 3,000 regular Indian army troops.

Our native men and officers had both been trained by the British. We had uniforms that the Pakistan government had sent to their fellow Moslems, and a good deal of Pakistani equipment.

Some of our officers were from the Pakistan army. They merely took off their old shoulder patches and put on the Azad patch, the squiggly Urdu language written on a green and white background.

Most of our soldiers and officers had seen a good deal of action with the British army in Africa or Italy. Some had fought in Burma, and other at Singapore.

Somewhere our officers had gotten into bad habits. Instead of taking the offensive, they were leading a nice quiet war.

Every day the general would hold staff meetings at which the officers would discuss tactics, write communications, and draw up long and involved field orders.

Then they would play cards and smoke the hookah—the water pipe, passing the bowl around from man to man as they reminisced about other campaigns.

After a morning of this, I got impatient. I went to the general and urged an attack. A few hours of argument, and he gave me permission to make a commando raid that night. I used his one okay as blanket approval for such a scheme of attacks and repeated the raids every night during the siege of Punch.

In these raids we killed more than 100 Hindus.

This is the way we worked it. We slept all day in a hole in the ground—a machine-gun pit surrounded by a rock breastworks and covered by a roof of tree branches. Indian army fighter planes would fly over us and strafe, but I never heard of anyone at the front being hurt by them.

Before dark we'd cut loose a few bursts of our Bren gun in the general direction of the enemy. This would upset the Indian troops and they'd answer back with machine gun or mortar fire, even though they didn't know where we were.

By watching for their response, we'd locate the mortar or machine-gun that would be our target for the night.

At dusk, I'd hold a little ceremony. The seven or eight men of my company I'd selected to take part in the raid would squat on their heels and laugh as they watched.

I'd char a stick in the fire and rub the black ash on my face to keep from being seen in the dark. My Moslems didn't have to bother about doing that.

I could have merely rubbed my face with dirt. But the little ritual put my men at ease. It made them laugh and won their confidence.

Then we'd clamber over the pit in the dark and I'd lead my men across the 300 yard no-man's-land to our objective.

I never allowed my men to carry rifles or pistols on these missions. They were trigger-happy, and our work had to be done silently if we were to come back alive.

We all carried instead a kukri—a short, razor-sharp Indian sword with a broad blade—or a hatchet. We worked very efficiently. When we had crept within a few yards of the gun or mortar we were after, I'd signal—a whistle, or a couple of taps of my kukri on a rock—and we'd all leap in at once.

My men were very good in the dark, and they did their work quickly and silently.

In five days we captured three mortars and two Bren guns—valuable equipment for our side.

The sixth day we had trouble. We were testing home-made grenades. I took them on the raid because I wanted to see whether they'd really work and I didn't want to waste any if they did.

They were made by pouring lead into a clay mold, filling it with gunpowder, and inserting a fire-cracker fuse.

The first grenade went off all right. It fragmented perfectly, killing four men at a Bren-gun post and making so much noise that the whole Indian army began firing at us.

One of my men was hurt. And then the blast shattered the Bren gun breech so all we got was a spare barrel.

We had trouble getting back. And when we did reach our lines, the general was angry.

We'd spoiled his nice war by disturbing the peace. With so much noise he couldn't think and make plans, and with so much firing it had become unsafe for him to walk around and supervise his men.

So we argued, one thing leading to another, and everything leading up to my telling him he wasn't fit to lead a Boy Scout troop.

I went back to Rawalpindi in Pakistan the next morning. I complained to Ibrahim the Moslem chief who had signed me up. After listening to my story, he said:

"Haight, I have some real action for you. Take 1,500 men to Kotli and drive the Hindu army from the town."

I agreed.

He didn't tell me then that of my 2,000 men 1,500 would be the same wild Pathan tribesmen the British had never been able to control.

(Tomorrow: Haight tells of the curious customs of the savage Pathan tribes, and how he led them in the capture of Kotli.)

President Truman urged Congress to extend promptly the remaining controls on key raw materials that expire on February 29th.

Congress was asked by the President to extend the Federal highway program of aid to states for two years at the rate of $500,000,000 a year. The Air Co-ordinating Committee urged upon the President that the level of aircraft production be set to meet full peacetime needs and admit of prompt expansion for defense.

FAMILIES AND HOUSES

Fifty-two experts—architects, builders, housing officials, medical authorities, home economists, sociologists and others—have come forward with another reason for solving the housing problem. They see in it a serious threat to the average family's desire to have children.

This conclusion is set forth in a booklet entitled "Houses for Family Living," published by the Woman's Foundation, Inc., a philanthropic organization devoted to research in "problems of the American home and of the American woman."

It is a thought-provoking case. The report points out that the American family has already shrunk. Today it is smaller by one-fourth than it was at one time. One reason for this is that the child, once a potential producer and thus an asset, is today an economic liability in most American homes "from the day the first doctor bills arrive."

So this incentive for a family to have children has largely disappeared. Those remaining are weakened, says the report, when there is a shortage of houses, when building costs are high, when existing dwellings are inadequate. It declares that a "prime issue of major family difficulties" lies in "the obsolete home and the obsolete community."

On the other side there is the evidence, in the unexpectedly high birth rate of the postwar years, that American families have children first and worry about houses to live in afterward. But in the long run the housing shortage could reverse the habit.

The law of supply and demand is beginning to function again, and in a manner that promises to bring prices to a realistic level. A buyers' strike has been gaining momentum, unheralded and unsung, and when this happens stocks and bonds, commodities and bread, automobiles and houses revert to prices that people will pay.

No one can contend seriously that a new house today is worth six times what a comparable structure cost 35 years ago. And, make no mistake about it, it will cost less than it has in recent months before the year's end. There is no danger of ruinous deflation, however. There is still lacked up demand for goods and commodities, but at honest prices.

A Senate committee has turned thumbs down on meat rationing. So perhaps it will not be necessary to go through all that "utility" bunk again, after all.

New Jersey woman has been given a divorce because her husband rubbed her face with a steak. Presumably, if he had wrapped a mink coat around her he would be electrocuted.

It is estimated that more than 300,000 cigarettes are lighted every minute, but it is not revealed how many of them burn table tops.

They are wild enough. Monkeys, tigers, and black and brown bear abound. As we passed jungles on the road from Rawalpindi in Pakistan I still cherished the hope of taking squads far behind the enemy lines, destroying communications, blowing up bridges, and creating general havoc.

Those thoughts and ideas were not based on my own war experience. I'd been wounded in the Canadian army during the Dieppe raid, and in the American army during the Normandy invasion.

I landed at Dieppe and right away got shot in the leg. Then, when I was down, a Jerry bashed me with a rifle butt. When I came to, I was in a hospital in England.

On D-Day in Normandy, I waded ashore and quick like an artillery burst got a chunk of shrapnel in my other leg. So they put me on the boat again, and there I was, back in an English hospital again.

I wound up the war as a sergeant in the Air Force at Lowry Field, near Denver.

I spent seven years in the American and Canadian armies during World War II but I saw only a few hours of action.

Maybe that's why I still had the yen to be a "hero" and had to get into a little war that hardly anyone has heard of, to see the kind of combat so many of my buddies had experienced.

When I got to the Punch front, I was full of fight. I found that the free Kashmir outfit had some 3,000 troops besieging a town of about 10,000, defended by perhaps 3,000 regular Indian army troops.

Our native men and officers had both been trained by the British. We had uniforms that the Pakistan government had sent to their fellow Moslems, and a good deal of Pakistani equipment.

Some of our officers were from the Pakistan army. They merely took off their old shoulder patches and put on the Azad patch, the squiggly Urdu language written on a green and white background.

Most of our soldiers and officers had seen a good deal of action with the British army in Africa or Italy. Some had fought in Burma, and other at Singapore.

Somewhere our officers had gotten into bad habits. Instead of taking the offensive, they were leading a nice quiet war.

Every day the general would hold staff meetings at which the officers would discuss tactics, write communications, and draw up long and involved field orders.

Then they would play cards and smoke the hookah—the water pipe, passing the bowl around from man to man as they reminisced about other campaigns.

After a morning of this, I got impatient. I went to the general and urged an attack. A few hours of argument, and he gave me permission to make a commando raid that night. I used his one okay as blank approval for such a scheme of attacks and repeated the raids every night during the siege of Punch.

In these raids we killed more than 100 Hindus. This is the way we worked it: We slept all day in a hole in the ground—a machine-gun pit surrounded by a rock breastworks and covered by a roof of tree branches. Indian army fighter planes would fly over us and strafe, but I never heard of anyone at the front being hurt by them.

Before dark we'd cut loose a few bursts of our Bren gun in the general direction of the enemy. This would upset the Indian troops and they'd answer back with machine gun or mortar fire, even though they didn't know where we were.

By watching their response, we'd locate the mortar or machine-gun that would be our target for the night.

At dusk, I'd hold a little ceremony. The seven or eight men of my company I'd selected to take part in the raid would squat on their heels and laugh as they watched.

I'd char a stick in the fire and rub the black ash on my face to keep from being seen in the dark. My Moslems didn't have to bother about doing that.

I could have merely rubbed my face with dirt, but the little ritual put my men at ease. It made them laugh and won their confidence.

Then we'd clamber over the pit in the dark and I'd lead my men across the 300 yard no-man's-land to our objective.

I never allowed my men to carry rifles or pistols on these missions. They were trigger-happy, and our work had to be done silently if we were to come back alive.

We all carried instead a kukli—a short, razor-sharp Indian sword with a broad blade—or a hatchet. We worked very efficiently. When we had crept within a few yards of the gun or mortar we were after, I'd signal—a whistle, or a couple of taps of my kukli on a rock—and we'd all leap in at once.

My men were very good in the dark, and they did their work quickly and silently.

In five days we captured three mortars and two Bren guns—valuable equipment for our side.

The sixth day we had trouble. We were testing home-made grenades. I took them on the raid because I wanted to see whether they'd really work, and I didn't want to waste any if they did.

They were made by pouring lead into a clay mold, filling it with gunpowder, and inserting a fire-cracker fuse.

The first grenade went off all right. It fragmented perfectly, killing four men at a Bren-gun post and making so much noise that the whole Indian army began firing at us.

One of my men was hurt. And then the blast shattered the Bren gun breech so all we got was a spare barrel.

We had trouble getting back. And when we did reach our lines, the general was angry.

We'd spoiled his nice war by disturbing the peace. With so much noise he couldn't think and make plans, and with so much firing it had become unsafe for him to walk around and supervise his men.

So we argued, one thing leading to another, and everything leading up to my telling him he wasn't fit to lead a Boy Scout troop.

I went back to Rawalpindi in Pakistan the next morning. I complained to Ibrahim the Moslem chief who had signed me up. After listening to my story, he said:

"Haight, I have some real action for you. Take 1,500 men to Kotli and drive the Hindu army from the town."

I agreed. He didn't tell me then that of my 2,000 men 1,500 would be the same wild Pathan tribesmen the British had never been able to control. (Tomorrow: Haight tells of the curious customs of the savage Pathan tribes, and how he led them in the capture of Kotli.)

President Truman urged Congress to extend promptly the remaining controls on key raw materials that expire on February 29th.

Congress was asked by the President to extend the Federal highway program of aid to states for two years at the rate of $500,000,000 a year. The Air Co-ordinating Committee urged upon the President that the level of aircraft production be set to meet full peacetime needs and admit of prompt expansion for defense.

UP FROM THE RANKS

To ORGANIZE, PLAN, AND DIRECT the telephone business—a business with its roots in so many communities throughout the state—hundreds of men and women, skilled in the complexities of telephone work, are required.

It is these men and women—telephone employees at various stages of their careers—who, side by side with all employees, accept the responsibility of providing you with good telephone service at low cost.

"Up from the ranks" is a familiar phrase to telephone people, for each of them knows that the opportunity to assume more and more responsibilities is open to all and that those who come up from the ranks earn, by their own abilities, the rewards of promotion for good work well done.

Opportunity of this sort means much to you, for the skill and experience of telephone people, working together in a common cause, are major factors in providing good telephone service at low cost.

Borough Council Favors Amusement Tax Levy

ough might increase its revenues to pay for increasing costs. Tax Collector William H. H. Fine was interrogated about the amount of delinquencies, and said he believed he could reduce these during the year.

The subject of occupational taxes, which has been discussed many times because of the high rate of delinquency, was brought up again. It was said by Mr. Fine that the assessors are now engaged re-checking these lists, and that the total collected should increase.

Councilman I. J. Hetherington suggested that the occupation taxes might well be changed in these ways: raised from $1.20 to $2 for all women; and in the case of men, standardized at $4 instead of the present sliding scale. It was said that the new rate of $6 per married couple would be nearly $3 a year more than the present scales.

Mr. Hetherington complained that the method of preparing the Borough budget was antiquated, and had been handed down for generations. He suggested a revision of real estate assessments, declaring that many inequities would be found to exist.

The annual report of the Borough auditors was read at the meeting. This report stated that the books of the Borough were found to be in balance, and all accounts in order.

The three auditors, however, who are De Roy Ott, Frank Jenks and Earl W. Smith, pointed out in their report that it was physically impossible for them, in the time at their disposal, to go through all of the records necessary for a complete audit. This would mean reviewing all records of the tax collector, the water department, as well as all other financial records of borough business. The auditors suggested that, if such a complete audit was felt to be necessary, the Borough ought to employ an outside, professional auditing concern.

President Rathke told the Council that, according to his understanding, the audit which the auditors had made was the kind which was customarily held, a so-called "surface" audit; that it covered the same ground as similar audits in the past; and that a complete audit would cost up to $5000.

After some discussion of the question, on motion of Councilman Pearson the Council voted to accept the auditors' report as a "surface audit" and to drop the idea of spending $5000 for a complete audit.

Police committee reported eight arrests with the cases disposed of in the following manner: Fined two; continued, one; held for court, four; committed to jail, one. One hundred and forty-six lodgers were sheltered, 12 street lights were reported out, radio car answered 70 alarms and was driven 3,422 miles. There were 62 fined for parking violations and a total of $647.54 was collected from the parking meters.

S. Joseph Alta, 2nd, reported that the police committee had met twice and was considering replacement of the police radio with a new one on a rental basis. Bids from the Bell Telephone Co., and Raymond Rosen Co., have been received and are being considered. The Bell Co. bids $3300 over a five year period while the Raymond Rosen Co. bids $3500 for the same period. The committee is further investigating and was given power to act.

Secretary Keating read a communication from the State which explained that the Borough has the legal right to prosecute and collect fines for traffic light violations until January 1, 1949, under the present system of overhead traffic lights which have been ordered removed after January 1st, 1949.

Permission to hang a sign received from Pasquale DiLorenzo was referred to street and highway committee with power to act.

Applications for plumbers' bonds received were referred to health and sanitation committee.

Councilman Riley moved that the borough treasurer be authorized to set up a form of requisition for all borough purchases. The motion was adopted.

Councilmen absent were Spring and Gosline.

File Damage Suit For Total of $5,000

25, 1947. The suit grows out of a dispute arising over the purchase and payment of garage doors and hardware.

Following a judgment of $65.86 by Justice of the Peace Edward Lynn, of Bristol, in favor of the plaintiff, Louis F. Cohn, trading as Lewis-Rose Company, the defendant, Irwin Hellerick, Plumsteadville, has filed an appeal in the Prothonotary's office. The judgment was given December 1, 1947, by Justice Lynn, but no details were mentioned in the transcript.

A writ of summons in trespass in the case of Tomasso Potere, administrator of the estate of Jack Leo Potere, versus Walter G. Rittler, 27 Woodside avenue, Bristol RD 1, and Adams-Wildblood, Inc., North Radcliffe street, Bristol, has been filed.

ough might increase its revenues to pay for increasing costs. Tax Collector William H. H. Fine was interrogated about the amount of delinquencies, and said he believed he could reduce these during the year.

The subject of occupational taxes, which has been discussed many times because of the high rate of delinquency, was brought up again. It was said by Mr. Fine that the assessors are now engaged re-checking these lists, and that the total collected should increase.

Councilman I. J. Hetherington suggested that the occupation taxes might well be changed in these ways: raised from $1.20 to $2 for all women; and in the case of men, standardized at $4 instead of the present sliding scale. It was said that the new rate of $6 per married couple would be nearly $3 a year more than the present scales.

Mr. Hetherington complained that the method of preparing the Borough budget was antiquated, and had been handed down for generations. He suggested a revision of real estate assessments, declaring that many inequities would be found to exist.

The annual report of the Borough auditors was read at the meeting. This report stated that the books of the Borough were found to be in balance, and all accounts in order.

The three auditors, however, who are De Roy Ott, Frank Jenks and Earl W. Smith, pointed out in their report that it was physically impossible for them, in the time at their disposal, to go through all of the records necessary for a complete audit. This would mean reviewing all records of the tax collector, the water department, as well as all other financial records of borough business. The auditors suggested that, if such a complete audit was felt to be necessary, the Borough ought to employ an outside, professional auditing concern.

President Rathke told the Council that, according to his understanding, the audit which the auditors had made was the kind which was customarily held, a so-called "surface" audit; that it covered the same ground as similar audits in the past; and that a complete audit would cost up to $5000.

After some discussion of the question, on motion of Councilman Pearson the Council voted to accept the auditors' report as a "surface audit" and to drop the idea of spending $5000 for a complete audit.

Police committee reported eight arrests with the cases disposed of in the following manner: Fined, two; continued, one; held for court, four; committed to jail, one. One hundred and forty-six lodgers were sheltered, 12 street lights were reported out, radio car answered 70 alarms and was driven 3,422 miles. There were 62 fined for parking violations and a total of $647.54 was collected from the parking meters.

S. Joseph Alta, 2nd, reported that the police committee had met twice and was considering replacement of the police radio with a new one on a rental basis. Bids from the Bell Telephone Co., and Raymond Rosen Co., have been received and are being considered. The Bell Co. bids $3300 over a five year period while the Raymond Rosen Co. bids $3500 for the same period. The committee is further investigating and was given power to act.

Secretary Keating read a communication from the State which explained that the Borough has the legal right to prosecute and collect fines for traffic light violations until January 1, 1949, under the present system of overhead traffic lights which have been ordered removed after January 1st, 1949.

Permission to hang a sign received from Pasquale DiLorenzo was referred to street and highway committee with power to act.

Applications for plumbers' bonds received were referred to health and sanitation committee.

Councilman Riley moved that the borough treasurer be authorized to set-up a form of requisition for all borough purchases. The motion was adopted.

Councilmen absent were Spring and Gosline.
